U.S. Capitol Locked Down After Shots Are Fired in Apparent Suicide

(The New York Times) The United States Capitol was temporarily locked down by law enforcement authorities Saturday after a man committed suicide by gunshot outside the elegant west front of the building, officials said. Witnesses described the suicide victim as a middle-aged male. He fired a single gunshot about 1 p.m., witnesses said, and did not interact with any nearby police officers or bystanders. Capitol Police Chief Kim Dine, speaking at an outdoor news conference near the scene of the shooting, said the victim carried a sign bearing a message about social justice. Authorities were withholding the identity of the victim until his immediate family could be notified. The bomb squad was called to investigate a backpack and a roller suitcase near the victim. Nothing threatening was found, officials said.

Man Held Over 'US Army Base Plot'

(BBC News) A 20-year-old US citizen has been charged with attempting to explode a car bomb at Fort Riley in Manhattan, Kansas. John T. Booker Jr. was making final preparations to carry out the suicide attack on behalf of the Islamic State (IS), the FBI said. Mr. Booker previously had tried to join the Army, but was denied entry because of internet posts about "jihad." Authorities say that US personnel were never in danger. Booker, also known as Mohammed Abdullah Hassan, enlisted in the military "with the intent to commit an insider attack against American soldiers," according to the FBI complaint. He has been charged with attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction, attempting to maliciously damage and destroy property of the US government, and attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

Gunmen Attack South Korea Embassy in Tripoli, Two Guards Killed

(Reuters) Unidentified gunmen fired shots at the South Korean embassy in the Libyan capital Tripoli on Sunday killing two local security guards, South Korean and Libyan officials said. Militants claiming loyalty to Islamic State said they were behind the attack, according to a statement on social media. It was not possible to verify the authenticity of the claim. The gunmen fired from a car at the embassy compound, killing two security officers who were Libyan government employees and wounding another, Tripoli security spokesman Essam Naas said. A South Korean foreign ministry official in Seoul said the embassy was staffed by two foreign service officials and one administrative staff member. He said the government was considering relocating it, but did not elaborate.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Dry conditions are expected today as a ridge of high pressure builds over the West Coast. Another front will bring a period of light rain late Monday afternoon and Monday night, primarily for areas north of Mendocino County.

Medford Weather:

Weak ridging will build into the area today bringing dry and milder conditions. Temperatures this afternoon will be 10-15 degrees warmer than yesterday. A cold front will reach the coast Monday afternoon and move inland Monday night. Snow levels Monday night will fall to around 3000 feet, but could lower to around 2500 feet in heavier showers. Tuesday will be a transition day with the upper trough moving east and ridging will start to build in from the southwest. Wednesday into next weekend conditions will be dry with much warmer temperatures.

Reno Weather:

High pressure over northeast California and western Nevada will bring above average temperatures through Monday. Winds will increase Monday and Tuesday as a strong cold front moves through the region. It will be cooler Tuesday with a chance for light showers north of Interstate 80. Cold mornings are expected Wednesday and Thursday before above average temperatures return late next week.

San Francisco Weather:

Mostly sunny conditions are forecast for today with temperatures warming well above seasonal normal. Cooling will occur Monday as a Pacific weather system approaches the West Coast. Rain with this system will mostly remain north of the forecast area, although light rain may reach northern Sonoma and Napa Counties Monday night. Cool and locally breezy conditions are forecast for Tuesday. High pressure will build across the region by midweek resulting in warm and dry weather during the second half of the week. Slight cooling will occur by next weekend, but dry weather is expected to persist.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Another relatively weak system will move through the forecast area late Monday into Tuesday. This system will bring cooling with a chance of showers mainly over the mountains north of I-80. From midweek through Friday the forecast area will experience warming temperatures under building high pressure.

Hanford Weather:

A ridge of high pressure will provide dry weather and above normal afternoon temperatures to the central California interior through Monday. A dry cold frontal passage Monday night will bring breezy and cooler weather Tuesday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

The forecast area will be sunny and warmer today and then cooler Monday and Tuesday. Stronger high pressure will warm temperatures to above normal beginning midweek through the end of the week.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

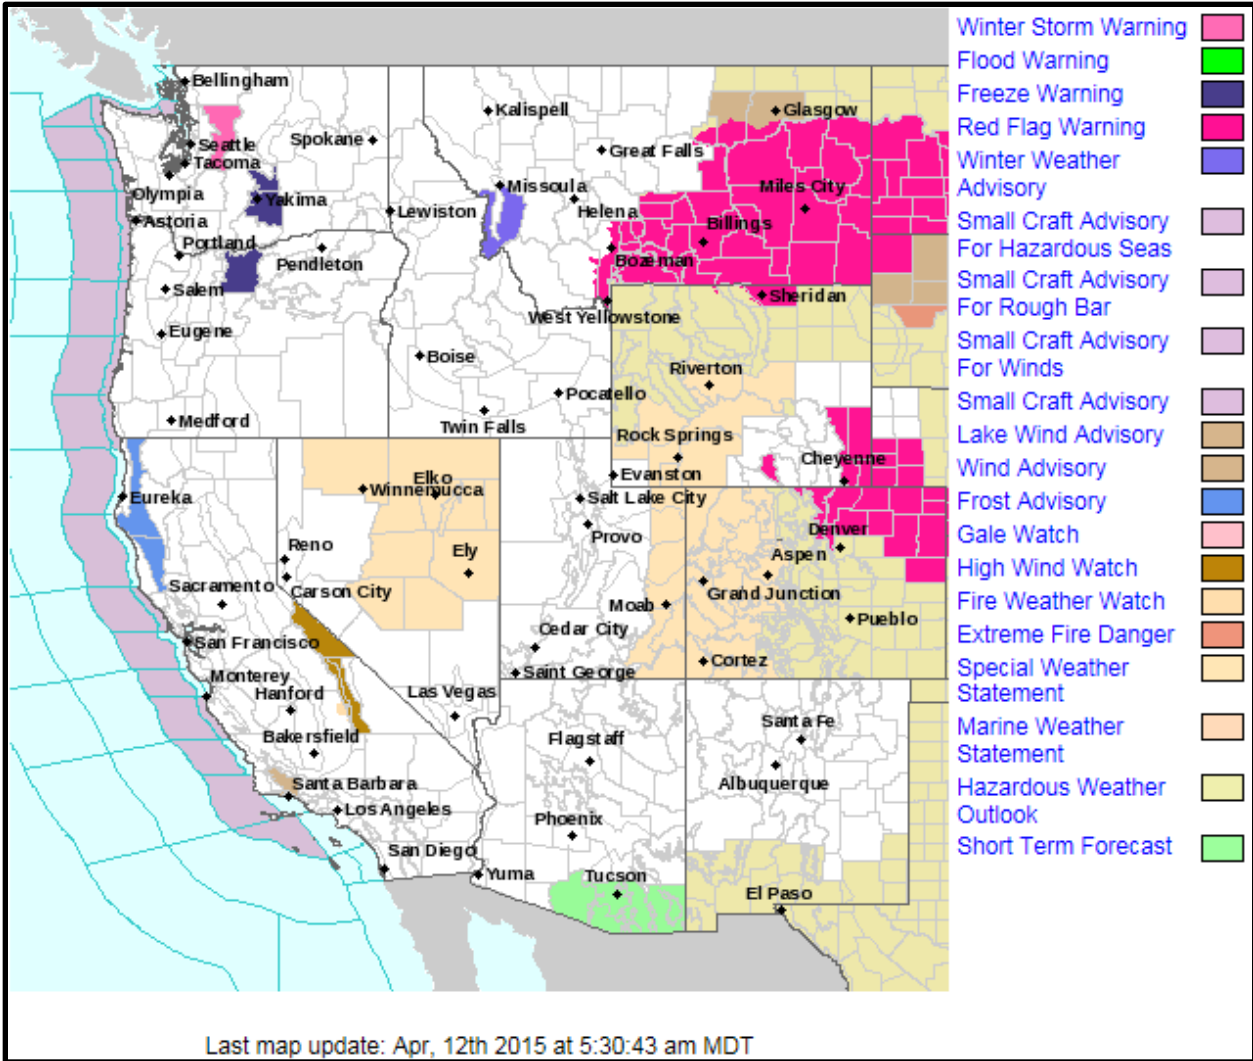

Today the weather will be slightly warmer under weak high pressure. For Monday, a trough of low pressure moving inland to the north will bring stronger onshore flow with cooling, gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts, and a deeper marine layer with night and morning coastal low clouds and fog pushing inland into portions of the inland valleys. This will continue into Tuesday with slight warming. High pressure aloft and moderate offshore flow will bring warming for Wednesday and Thursday with gusty northeast winds near the coastal foothills. Slow cooling will spread inland for Friday through next weekend as weak onshore flow returns.

Southeast California Weather:

A brief period of upper level ridging will promote a quick warm-up early next week before another storm passes through the intermountain west mainly to the north of the forecast area. This storm will usher in a much drier air mass, breezy to gusty winds, and cooler temperatures for the latter half of the week.
